

Anna Campbell BA (hons) PGCE (PCET)

I am a lecturer in Psychology with specific interests in Criminal and Forensic Psychology. I am currently completing a Masters degree in Forensic Psychology. I am also an examiner for the exam board AQA. Although I focus on Psychology in my main teaching job, part of my first degree was English.

I became involved in working with ET when I worked with Roger Freestone at an FE college.

My role has two facets. I support the home study students who have decided to take the opportunity to practice and prepare for the exam and I mark the exam papers for all English students.

The home study students benefit from the practice of completing exam style questions, having them marked and constructive feedback. Students can then use this feedback on further home study questions to improve their writing technique for their exam.

Some students feel confident with their English ability and opt to do the exam immediately. I also mark these and send feedback on each section with the overall mark.

I enjoy working with the diverse students that ET caters for and I love seeing people develop their skills through home study and passing the exam first time!

I look forward to working with you and good luck for your career in teaching.
